CUPID'S NEW WEAPON

By LOIS CRAYTON.

All day he had watched her on the trail as the horses wound around high, rocky cliffs, across tracts of shale and through deep valleys. Hedgeman, the leader, who knew the country well, went ahead; then came the venture-some spirits, ready to take risks of slides and places on narrow ledges, where pieces of rock might have fallen away since the last ranger passed on his lonely patrol.

But the mountain ponies were sure-footed—too sure-footed, for they went close to the edge sometimes. The horse the girl rode insisted on walking as far away from the cliff as possible.

The man kept his eye on the girl. Most of the time her left foot was dangling over space, but she gave no sign that she was afraid.

When night came they camped in a valley, and after supper most of the weary souls crawled into bed. A few still lingered, however, around the great fire. The man and the girl sat apart talking.

"You are not afraid of anything, are you?" he said.

She laughed. "Goodness, yes—spiders and mice, measles and burglars."

"I doubt it!"

"What did I do to make you think I was—brave?"

"Most girls would have screamed or fainted when that horse went so close to the edge."

"And I kept quiet. That was only the instinct of self-preservation. I didn't want to scare him."

"That isn't true, I'm afraid. I insist on giving you the palm of courage."

"And I insist that I am as much of a coward as anybody."

"What are you afraid of, then?"

"I told you—burglars for one thing."

"And?"

"You for another."

"Me?"

"Yes. You insist on dragging my feelings out into daylight and analyzing them. I suppose you'll soon discover that I'm fond of vegetable soup and hate to use semicolons, and that incidentally these riding boots have rubbed my stockings into tatters."

"I'd forgotten. You must be dead tired." He got up instantly and helped her to her feet. "Go to bed now and be fresh for new worlds tomorrow."

He pressed her hand warmly and was gone.

They were together a great deal after that; they rode side by side when possible, sat together at meals, and had splendid campfire talks. He insisted on calling her brave as each day brought new risks which she took without flinching.

The trip came to an end; the man took train for Seattle, the girl went east, and the party scattered in all directions.

The girl's family had not come home from Canada and she undertook the opening of the townhouse.

She had long, quiet evenings alone after busy days, and she lived over her wonderful time in the mountains. There were camera views to go over, some of the man. "He's so different from most men," she mused, "so big. He's been all over the world, he says. I suppose he builds bridges and tunnels mountains and constructs dams and aqueducts, for he would never be content to spend his time doing little things."

One evening, after looking through her travel book again, she decided to go to bed. Hulda, the cook, had gone to her room on the third floor, and she was alone. She made a round of the rooms, fastened windows, snapping on locks and turning out lights.

Then she returned to the library to switch off the table light before going upstairs.

And there stood a man with a black mask over his face and an automatic ready for action.

"Oh!" said the girl, standing quite still.

"Keep quiet," said the intruder, "and I won't hurt you."

And the girl kept very quiet; in truth, she slipped in a heap to the floor, for she had fainted.

"I'm a fool!" A man's voice was the first thing she heard when her senses came back. She was on a couch and Hulda was rubbing her face and hands. She thought she knew the voice.

The girl sat up. "You!" she cried.

"Yes, I!" said the man grimly, the man with whom she had traveled over 800 miles of mountains.

"And here I've been thinking you did big, wonderful things to help the world, and you're a—"

"A burglar? No, I'm not really. Listen. I just got back from the West today—this evening—and I couldn't go to sleep until I had located your house. It was too late to come in, but I just wanted to know where you lived. When I was passing I saw a man working at the side window, so I got the corner policeman and we nabbed him. Then I thought of something, just a fool notion of mine to test your courage further, for I didn't believe you when you said you were afraid of burglars. You know what it was. I played burglar. Forgive me!"

"And I played baby," she said, ashamed.

"You are adorable, and I love you," said the man.

"Then it's all right," sighed the girl happily, "but it's the first time I ever knew Cupid to use a gun."

HOME-GROWN SEED IS THE SUREST AND BEST SELECT SEED CORN

ENOUGH FOR TWO YEARS

For 1918 Plantings and to Insure Adapted Seed for 1919

START RIGHT—NOW!

WHERE?

In the field from standing stalks of a variety that has "made good" and become locally adapted.

HOW?

Pick best ears from plants showing best yields in fair competition with neighboring plants. Storm-proof plants with hanging ears give best seed. Long ears with large, uniform kernels are the best. Avoid sappy ears heavy with water.

Insure a Right Start for Your Next Two Corn Crops by Saving Ample Seed Now

For Further Information Ask Your County Agent, or Write for

Farmers' Bulletin 415, "Seed Corn"

U. S. DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE,
Washington, D. C.

WHEN?

As soon as ears are ripe and hard—before heavy frosts or autumn rains injure the kernels for seed. The day the ears are selected they should be hung where they will become thoroughly dry in a few days.

WHY?

It pays. Field selection of seed corn is one of the surest and best paying operations on the farm. Proper care of seed corn pays well. Tests show that properly cared for seed corn has yielded eighteen bushels more per acre than crib-stored seed from the same field.

Cat Domesticated Ages Ago.

The cat was domesticated among the Egyptians at least 1,800 years before Christ, and it was dignified by them with a titular deity. Since then it has appeared in all parts of the world as a pet. During the middle ages a superstition was attributed to the animal. Many persons believed cats to be the reincarnation of evil spirits. Modern science gives it an equally bad character, though of a different sort, and says that the cat must go.

Chariot as Engine of War.

Among some nations of antiquity chariots may be regarded as filling the place of heavy artillery, so that the military power of a nation might be estimated by the number of its chariots. Thus Pharaoh in pursuing Israel took with him 600 chariots.
